FINANCIAL INCLUSION

New approaches in mature and emerging markets

More people than ever are struggling with their finances as a result of the recent economic uncertainties and banks have a responsibility to help them wherever possible.

Efma is therefore launching a new conference on financial inclusion. This has become a major issue, not only in emerging and remote markets, but also in mature markets where some groups are still marginalised. For financial institutions, fighting financial exclusion and poverty is not 'charity' but business. Banks have the opportunity of developing new models, services and products that will help the poor and the unbanked - and will ultimately also provide a new source of revenues.

Key questions

- How can banks promote financial inclusion in emerging and mature markets? The conference will hear about different experiences in this area and how banks can develop a global, sustainable and profitable approach to inclusion.
- What types of products and services are needed in emerging and mature markets? What are the latest innovations and developments in areas such as microfinance, P2P and healthcare loans? How can micro insurance help to protect vulnerable populations?

What are the specific needs of groups such as young and rural workers, migrants and Islamic populations? What is the role of cross-border products and services, such as loans, international money transfers and payments?

- What are the best models for reaching the unbanked? What low-cost business models are there for low-income groups? What opportunities do alternative distribution channels and new technologies offer?

Hot topics

Other topics that will be discussed include:

- New branch concepts and potential no-branch models
- Developing partnerships between financial and non-financial players
- Working with communities
- Investing in financial education
- Identifying insolvency risks to prevent over-indebtedness
- Developing a soft debt collection approach

STUDY PRESENTATIONS

Key findings from this year's reports will be presented during the conference:

- The migrants' market: recent changes and outlook by Efma and Kurt Salmon
- Retail banking distribution in emerging markets by Efma and BCG

Financial inclusion: transactional banking to lifestyle element

- Consumers often change their habits and are often unaware of their latent needs
- Profitability in the mass market/financial inclusion space requires creative products which boost income per customer by meeting these latent needs
- Products must be relevant and affordable: accessible at an agent shop or via a mobile device
- Products and services capable of taking financial inclusion from transaction banking to a way of life

Distribution challenges for retail banks in emerging markets

- Strong opportunities across emerging markets, but not all countries are the same
- Branches are still at core of the distribution strategy, but with a changing role and an increasing need for efficiency
- Online and mobile are already table stakes, but channel integration is still a key challenge
- Low-cost alternative channels are the key to profitability in the mass/lower mass segments

New payment systems: for all or for the few?

- People with very different life experiences: financially excluded or at risk of exclusion for many and diverse reasons
- New payment systems: potential to contribute to financial inclusion but not necessarily do so
- Danger: new systems may supersede older services that are better adapted to the needs of those at risk
- Challenges for payment service providers and regulators: adapting payment systems to the needs of those at risk

New business models in the payment industry with digital innovations

- Very disruptive: I don't need a bank anymore. Examples:
 - . Bitcoin: from Geek money to a universal money?
 - . Ripple: immediate multi-currency payment exchange
- Disruptive: my bank and ...? My Wallet of course.
 - More than a multi-channel banking strategy: a fully dedicated 100% mobile experience, with social media integration
- Complex payment for a digital moving world: new business models
- Mobile payment for unbanked people: building up an agent network quickly in a southern country, where populations are massively unbanked for different reasons
